Orca: new wetsuits and show specials at TCR

- First chance to see all new 2011 Orca Speedsuit range
- Show exclusive: 20% off on performance Merino wool activewear and new 2011 compression wear
- New Orca Sonar wetsuit up for grabs

Visitors to the TCR show will be amongst the first in the world to see, and try on, Orca's all new 2011 wetsuit collection. Orca's product development team has completely re-designed the range, including the introduction of a revolutionary new buoyancy material in the Orca 3.8 and Alpha.

The Orca stand will also feature some TCR exclusive deals, including 20% off the performance Merino wool activewear range, and the new 2011 compression range. There will also be a competition with the major prize of a new 2011 Orca Sonar wetsuit worth £265.

"Orca offers the most extensive range of triathlon wetsuits available," explains Chuck Cosman from Orca UK. "The new generation 3.8 and Alpha wetsuits provide the highest levels of performance on the market, and that's why they're the wetsuit of choice for athletes including Chris McCormack, Craig Alexander, Emma Moffatt, Tim Don, Vicky Holland and Jodie Stimpson.

"The popular Sonar has been enhanced with the addition of panels of ultra-buoyant Aerodome on the lower back and legs, while the Equip is now 100% neoprene and features flexible 2mm neoprene across the entire upper body.

"For many people it will also be the first chance to get up close and feel the benefits of New Zealand Merino wool. It's one of nature's superfibres is the ideal baselayer for active people. It regulates your body temperature, keeping you warm when it's cool and cool when it's warm, it manages moisture and best of all it is anti-bacterial, so you can wear it for days on end and it won't smell."
